INTERVIEW SUMMARY

Caroline Montgomery has 20 years of home health experience, including private care for Alzheimer's and wheelchair-bound clients, and currently works part-time at a daycare. She is COVID vaccinated, has CPR certification, and her CNA license is expired. She can lift over 70 lbs (partially weight-bearing) and 70 lbs (non-weight-bearing), and she uses a gait belt with correct technique. She described Hoyer lift and transfer board experience, but the technique she described is a concern, and she has no feeding tube experience. She is available anytime, has a clear background, and accepts 1099 forms. In the care scenarios, Caroline answered 6 out of 10 questions correctly, with solid gait belt technique and a clear scope boundary, and an area for development in Parkinson's care.

SCENARIO & EMERGENCY RESPONSES

Fall Emergency — 2/2

If you walk into the home and find the client on the floor complaining of hip pain, what are your immediate step-by-step actions?

Answer: I would not try to lift them. I would check whether they are responsive, look for an obvious injury, call 911, and stay with them while I call their family and my supervisor.

Evaluation: Covers leaving the client in place, checking responsiveness, calling emergency services, and notifying the family and supervisor.

Agitation / Refusal — 1/2

If a client becomes agitated, refuses their medication, or demands to leave the house, how do you handle it?

Answer: I would lower my voice, give them a little space, and call my supervisor if they still refused.

Evaluation: Stays calm and escalates to a supervisor. Does not mention redirection or validating how the client feels, so this is partial.

Scope Boundary 2/2

If a family member or client asks you to perform a task outside your care scope, how do you respond?

Answer: I would say that task is outside my training, I would not do it, and I would call my supervisor and the family.

Evaluation: Refuses out-of-scope work and escalates. This matches the recommendation to continue to an in-person interview.
